

University Studies (General Education) North Carolina A&T State University

PRE- PROPOSAL WORKSHOP Spring 2005 Pilot Course Development

Would you like to develop an interdisciplinary course? Could you use help in designing the course? If so, please join us for a workshop led by the Academy for Teaching and Learning on Thursday September 16, 2004 (3:00-5:00 PM) in Dowdy 304.

The workshop will help you develop a proposal for the new University Studies (General Education) program to be implemented in Fall 2005. Faculty with competitively selected proposals will receive compensation in the form of release time or stipend.

As workshop participants, you will get hands-on experience in how to:

- Integrate other disciplines into your course
- Develop measurable learning objectives
- Create curricular milestones to assess student progress
- Identify assessment tools, performance indicators and rubrics

Faculty from all schools and colleges are welcome. To register for the workshop, please send an e-mail, including your name and department, to sarin@ncat.edu by August 23, 2004.

The workshop will cover the new vision of the General Education (University Studies) core curriculum (for more information, see <http://www.ncat.edu/simkinss/gened>) and outline an intentional course development and assessment process that proposal writers will need to address in their proposals. A Call for Proposals for developing pilot University Studies courses in the Spring 2005 semester will be distributed at the workshop and also posted on the website listed above.