

NATIONAL DISTANCE LEARNING WEEK 2025

11/3-11/7

The Great AI Disequilibrium

The United States Distance Learning Association created National Distance Learning Week (NDLW) to generate greater awareness and appreciation for distance learning. Here at A&T we appreciate and celebrate our online students and faculty and all they do.

FACULTY

AI: The Great Disequilibrium Panel

11/3, noon-1pm

This panel will discuss the adaptive expectations, adaptive learning, heuristic switching and rational/irrational behavior you are seeing at your institution concerning AI. It will also attempt to answer the question that is always asked when systems are in disequilibrium - should you accelerate or brake?

USDLA Webinars

11/3-11/7, 11am-2pm

In a long tradition of honoring National Distance Learning Week (NDLW), this year the United States Distance Learning Association (USDLA) will once again host a free, virtual, week-long NDLW conference. Join webinars all week long.

Balancing Heart and Machine: Using Social-Emotional Cue Cards to Reconnect Adult Learners in the Age of AI

11/6, 2pm-3pm

Amid The Great AI Disequilibrium, Dr. Jakki Williams of North Carolina A&T State University re-imagines motivation in Online learning through Motivational Cue Cards, a playful, reflective tool rooted in social-emotional learning and self-determination theory. This session reveals how small moments of reflection can powerfully restore balance, focus, and connection for adult learners.

STUDENTS

Bluford Library Online Scavenger Hunt

11/3, Starts at 10am

The Bluford Library Online Scavenger Hunt invites Online learners to explore digital resources, discover hidden gems within the library's virtual collections, and strengthen their research skills in a fun, interactive way. The first 150 Online Aggies to complete the hunt will receive a free coffee on us! Check your student email for instructions and get ready to join the adventure!

Online Learner Check-In featuring Bank of America

11/5, 6pm-7pm

Join us for the Online Learner Check-In featuring Bank of America, a dynamic session designed to help Online Aggies strengthen their financial literacy, explore digital resources, and connect career goals with real-world opportunities. Learn practical money management tips, discover tools to build financial confidence, and see how Handshake can open doors to internships and career pathways. Plus, stick around for exclusive giveaways and Aggie swag!

Thrive Co-Working Social Media Giveaway

11/5, Visit our Social Media Pages for the Designated Post

Whether it's your cozy couch, kitchen table, or favorite coffee shop — we want to see where you thrive! Drop a photo of your learning space in the comments for a chance to win a free day pass to work from any Thrive Co-Working space in America.

