

Dear Fellow Aggies,

Welcome back to the CAES.

We salute you as Aggies, because as alumni of the College of Agriculture and Environmental Sciences you are the very incarnation of what an Aggie is.

Agriculture was the origin of A&T's creation in 1891, and more than 125 years later it is our College of Agriculture and Environmental Sciences that is producing esteemed graduates such as you and your peers. You have gone on to become leaders in your respective fields of agribusiness, animal sciences, food science, agriculture, global studies, landscape architecture, Cooperative Extension, urban horticulture, agricultural education, health and nutrition, child development, family and consumer sciences, natural resources and other agricultural and environmental science related fields.

Your success means our success, for the CAES, for A&T as a whole, for the communities that you came from and for those you affect.

You are ambassadors for us all. And the CAES needs you.

We need your continued support to help mentor students, to network with faculty, to help us recruit and engage students to our programs.

Please visit the Alumni Contact link on this page if you're willing to help with this outreach.

Bookmark this page for continued CAES updates.

Thank you for giving back.

.... Because that's what Aggies Do!

Dr. Shirley Hymon-Parker, interim dean

College of Agriculture and Environmental Sciences